

Communicate your vision in a way that makes individuals on your team feel seen, recognized, and connected.

Inspiring your team with your vision is about more than your presentation skills. It's also about listening, honesty, and empathy. As a manager, you have all of these elements within you. In this workshop you'll learn how to put them together to motivate and inspire your team.

Learning objectives include:

- Learn to harness the most impactful tool you have as a communicator — your authentic voice.
- Strike a balance between honesty about the challenges ahead, and optimism about why you're confident that the team can succeed.
- Learn how to connect your message to the individuals in your audience by using anecdotes, stories, and references that land.
- Explore ways to allow your team to visualize and feel your vision using simple best practices

About our facilitator:

Tim Fortescue is a certified executive coach and corporate trainer in San Francisco. Since 2014, Tim has partnered with leaders in tech to bring their communication, messaging, and confidence to the next level. In 2021, he founded 40 Watt Coaching--his own coaching and training firm.

“The Compelling Vision training was an immensely valuable training for any manager of a team. In this ‘Great Resignation’ world, I’m craving anything that I can apply to ensure my employees are motivated, professionally growing, and committed & aligned in achieving our 2022 goals. I walked away with frameworks and techniques I could immediately use, and I now feel much more confident that I have the skills to deliver a vision that will energize them for the year ahead!”
